

A SCHOOL PANIC AVERTED.

MISS MURRAY'S COOLNESS AFTER MR. VAN COTT'S MISTAKE.

A Music Teacher Got a Fit in the Hall and the Vice-Principal in His Excitement Rana Up the Fire Engines as Well as an Ambulance—Miss Murray Met the Firemen at the Door and Sent Them Away.

Coolness and presence of mind on the part of Miss Anna A. Murray, Principal of the Primary Department of Grammar School No. 26, in West Thirtieth street, averted what might have resulted in serious panic and loss of life among the school children this morning.

Charles Ferrero, the special music teacher of the school, had just finished giving his instructions and was on his way downstairs about 10.30 o'clock, when he was taken with an epileptic fit on the second landing.

A colored lad coming in a few moments later found him lying there, and going to one of the assistant lady teachers on that floor reported that there was a dead man out in the hallway.

The fact was immediately reported to Vice-Principal Van Cott, who was on the top floor, and who immediately hurried down stairs, followed by Mr. Rice, one of his assistants.

He recognized Mr. Ferrero, and his first impulse was to send out an ambulance call from the special box, which is located in the school-house. In the excitement of the moment, however, he failed to observe the instructions in the box and sent out both fire and ambulance calls at once.

Less than two minutes afterwards Engine No. 1 came up at full speed, followed in quick succession by Engines 26 and 19 and Hook and Ladder No. 7. The firemen were all prepared for desperate work, knowing what a fire panic in a school-house is, and began at once to run out home, while several of them made a dash for the door.

They were met in the hallway by Miss Murray, who had left her schoolroom when the excitement began, and who begged them not to come into the building and to make as little noise as possible for fear of frightening the children.

In a few words she had explained the cause of the trouble and the false alarm, and Chief Giquel ordered the various companies to go back to their quarters as quietly as possible. Meanwhile a child in the whole school, which numbers over four hundred pupils, knew anything of the disturbance. Only one or two of the teachers were aware of what had taken place, and not a single alarm call was sent out.

The two ambulances, one from the New York Hospital and one from Bellevue, which had responded to the call, were sent back, because Mr. Ferrero, who had been carried to the Principal's room, had come out of his fit and was unwilling to go to the hospital, saying that he would be able to go home as soon as had been given a little time to rest.

Chief Giquel was kind in his praises of Miss Murray's conduct, and declared that nothing could have better shown her pluck and courage or her ability as a disciplinarian, while Miss Murray herself modestly disclaimed any special credit for her timely interference.

When found by the reporter of THE EVENING WORLD, Mr. Van Cott was still in an extremely nervous and rattled condition. He was writing out a report of the case for Rounsman Shields, of the Thirtieth street station.

"The first thing that upset me," he said, "was the message that there was a dead man in the hall."

When I got downstairs, and found Mr. Ferrero lying on his back, and it was so very feeble at once thought of sending for an ambulance.

I knew there was a call in the fire-box, but as the Principal, Mr. Hugh Carlisle, had always had charge of the key, I did not know exactly how it worked.

"Fortunately I found the key, and reading over the directions hurriedly pulled the slot, after which the pointer at the word 'Ambulance' as the instructions directed."

"I didn't see, however, that it said I must hold the pointer at that word while the slot went back, but let go at the same time I did the button."

"The result was that the first thing I knew we had five or six fire-engines around here, as well as ambulances."

"It is very fortunate that the matter was kept from the children, for there is no telling what might have happened."

OUR FIRE CHIEF'S SERIES.

"Worthy of Promotion," written by Assistant Chief Hugh Bonner, will begin in THE EVENING WORLD to-morrow.

JERSEY CITY JOTTINGS.

John and Thomas Murray and John McGahan were held for further examination this morning on a charge of stealing silver from a woman, who failed to appear at the trial.

The old Board of Public Works of Jersey City adjourned for good yesterday. The new board, which is composed of three Republicans and three Democrats, met at noon and adjourned without organizing.

Bernard Garvey, who resented and fought Police-McDonald when arrested for disorderly conduct, was committed for trial this morning by Justice Sullivan on a charge of assault and battery on the officer.
